Civil No. 2:05cv00485

AMENDED COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

- 1. The Internet has revolutionized our society, representing the most participatory marketplace of mass speech yet developed it is in many ways a far more speech-enhancing medium than radio or television, print, the mails, or even the village green. Hundreds of millions of people can now engage in interactive communication on a national and global scale via computer networks that are connected to the Internet. The Internet enables average citizens, with a few simple tools and at a very low cost, to participate in local or worldwide conversations, publish an online newspaper, distribute an electronic pamphlet, and communicate with a broader audience than ever before possible. The Internet provides millions of users with access to a vast range of information and resources. Internet users are far from passive listeners rather, they are empowered by the Internet to seek out exactly the information they need and to respond with their own communication, if desired.
- 2. The Internet presents extremely low entry barriers to anyone who wishes to provide or distribute information or gain access to it. Unlike television, cable, radio, newspapers, magazines or books, the Internet provides the average citizen with an affordable means for communicating with, accessing and posting content to a worldwide audience.
- 3. In 2005, the State of Utah enacted a broadly restrictive censorship law that imposes severe content-based restrictions on the availability, display and dissemination of constitutionally-protected speech on the Internet. House Bill 260, enacted on March 2, 2005, and signed by Governor Jon Huntsman, Jr. on March 21, 2005 (the "Act"), among other things:

- Expands existing Utah law with respect to distribution to minors of harmful to minors material and pornographic material to include Internet content and Internet service providers ("ISPs").
- Requires the Attorney General to create a public "Adult Content Registry" of websites that he has unilaterally declared to include constitutionallyprotected harmful to minors material, without any judicial review.
- Requires ISPs either to block access to websites included in the registry and other constitutionally-protected content or to provide filtering software to users.
- Requires Utah-connected content providers to self-evaluate and label the content of their speech, at the risk of criminal punishment.

A copy of the Act is attached hereto as Appendix A.

- 4. The Act infringed the liberties of the residents of the State of Utah, imposing the restrictive hand of the State to supplant the power and responsibility of parents to control that which may be viewed by their children. It also infringed the liberties of millions of persons outside Utah who are affected by these restrictions.
- 5. Portions of the Act took effect on March 21, 2005, the date of the Governor's signature. The remaining provisions became effective at various times in 2006. The portions of the Act challenged in this lawsuit, however, were enjoined first by a stipulated order entered by the Court on November 28, 2005, and then by a superseding preliminary injunction entered by the Court on August 25, 2006. Pursuant to these and other orders, most proceedings in this case were generally stayed at the request of the defendants to give defendants and the Utah legislature opportunities in both 2006 and 2007 to repeal or otherwise correct the challenged provisions of the Act.
- 6. On February 28, 2007, the Utah legislature, in response to plaintiffs' claims in this lawsuit and in an attempt to remedy some of the unconstitutional provisions imposed by the Act, passed House Bill 5, which was signed by the Governor on March - 19, 2007. A copy of H.B. 5 is attached hereto as Appendix B. Among other things, H.B. 5 repealed the provisions of the Act with respect to the Adult Content Registry. While the provisions of H.B. 5, by the terms of the bill, took effect on the date of signature by the Governor, as to the amendments to §§ 76-10-1205, -1206, -1231, and -1233, they have as yet no practical effect by reason of the preliminary injunction entered by this Court on August 25, 2006.

- 7. While certain portions of H.B. 5 made changes to the provisions of H.B. 260 that are challenged in this action, apart from the fully repealed Adult Content Registry, the changes made by H.B. 5 do not cure the constitutional defects in the resulting statutory provisions.
- 8. This action seeks to have the Act, as amended by H.B. 5 (the "Amended Act") declared facially unconstitutional and void, and to have the State enjoined from enforcing the Amended Act, by reason of the First, Fifth, and Fourteenth Amendments to, and the Commerce Clause of, the United States Constitution.
- 9. With respect to the application to the Internet of the criminal provisions relating to distribution to minors of harmful to minors materials, 18 federal judges, including three Courts of Appeal and one State Supreme Court, have struck down as unconstitutional laws in Arizona, Michigan, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, and Wisconsin similar to the Act. In addition, the United States Supreme Court invalidated a similar federal law on First Amendment grounds in Reno v. ACLU, 521 U.S. 844 (1997), aff'g 929 F. Supp. 824 (E.D.Pa. 1996), and, only weeks ago, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania invalidated the subsequent federal statute (ACLU v. Gonzales, ____ F. Supp.2d ____, No. 98-5591 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 22, 2007)).

- materials over the Internet is limited by the terms of the preliminary injunction, ambiguity is raised by the amendment of § 76-10-1201(4)(a) by H.B. 5 (the "Of/with Amendment"). That amendment changed Utah's harmful to minors statute from addressing a "prurient interest in sex of minors" to addressing a "prurient interest in sex with minors." It is not clear whether this change is meant to limit "harmful to minors" materials to (a) descriptions or representations of nudity, sexual conduct, sexual excitement or sadomasochistic abuse ("Explicit Sex") where one or both of the participants is a minor; (b) descriptions or representations of Explicit Sex where neither of the participants is a minor but which appeals to the prurient interest of a minor in sex with or among minors; or (c) some other category of materials. Under any explanation as to the meaning of the statute as amended by the "Of/with Amendment," the resulting statute violates the First Amendment.
- 11. With respect to requiring ISPs to block access to particular websites on the Internet, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania invalidated a similar Pennsylvania state law, finding the law to be unconstitutional on both First Amendment and Commerce Clause grounds. Center for Democracy & Technology v. Pappert, 337 F. Supp. 2d 606 (E.D. Pa. 2004). In that case, the court found that as a result of the ISPs' attempts to comply with blocking orders requiring ISPs to block access to fewer than 400 websites, the ISPs unavoidably also blocked access to more than one million completely unrelated websites. Id. at 624, 642 (Findings of Facts ¶¶ 77, 189).

- 12. Since essentially all speech on the Internet is accessible in Utah, regardless of the geographical location of the person who posted it, the Act threatened Internet users nationwide and even worldwide. Moreover, because blocking a website often results in blocking wholly unrelated websites communicating constitutionally protected speech, the Act threatened an enormous array of websites and their users.
- 13. Because of the way the Internet works, the Amended Act's prohibition on distributing to minors material by the Internet that is "harmful to minors" effectively bans distribution of that same material to adults.
- 14. The speech targeted by the Amended Act material that is asserted to be "harmful to minors" is or includes that which is constitutionally protected for adults. This includes, for example, valuable works of literature and art, safer sex information, examples of popular culture, and a wide range of robust human discourse about current issues and personal matters that may include provocative or sexually oriented language and images.
- 15. The Amended Act inevitably means that Internet content providers will limit the range of their speech, because there are no reasonable technological means that enable users of the Internet to ascertain the age of persons who access their communications, or to restrict or prevent access by minors to certain content.

 Consequently, the Amended Act reduces adult speakers and users in cyberspace to reading and communicating only material that is suitable for young children.

- 16. In addition, the Amended Act prohibits speech that is valuable and constitutionally protected for minors, especially older minors.
- 17. To the extent any ISPs comply with certain sections of the Amended Act by blocking access to certain websites, the Amended Act inevitably means that access to other unrelated and wholly innocent websites will also be blocked. Moreover, the blocking of websites (both those targeted by the Amended Act and the unrelated websites) will in most cases prevent all customers of an ISP, both in Utah and elsewhere in the country, from accessing the websites. In some other cases, an ISP will not have the technical capability to block their customers' access to specified websites on the Internet.
- 18. The Amended Act violates the First Amendment and Commerce Clause rights of plaintiffs, their members, their users and tens of millions of other speakers and users of the Internet, and threatens them with irreparable harm.
- 19. In addition, the Amended Act violates the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution because it regulates commerce occurring wholly outside of the State of Utah, because it imposes an impermissible burden on interstate and foreign commerce, and because it subjects interstate use of the Internet to inconsistent state regulations. An online content provider outside of Utah cannot know whether someone in Utah might download his or her content posted on the Web; consequently, the content provider must comply with Utah law or face the threat of criminal prosecution.
- Plaintiffs seek permanent injunctive relief prohibiting enforcement of the Amended Act.

FACTS

41. Many of the claims raised in this Amended Complaint arise because of the specific technical aspects of Internet communications and the capabilities (or lack of capabilities) of Internet content providers and Internet service providers. The facts in this Amended Complaint are organized into four major sections. First, the Amended Complaint provides a general overview of Internet communications. Second, the Amended Complaint describes a number of technical details about how Internet content providers make content available as part of the "World Wide Web," and how the Web and other communications flow over the Internet. Third, the different elements of the Amended Act challenged in this Amended Complaint are identified. And fourth, the Amended Complaint details the impact of the Amended Act on Internet communications in general, and on the rights of the Plaintiffs in particular.

A. An Overview of Internet Communications

- 42. The Internet is a decentralized, local medium of communication that links people, institutions, corporations and governments around the world. It is a giant computer network that interconnects innumerable smaller groups of linked computer networks and individual computers. Although estimates are difficult due to its constant and rapid growth, the Internet is currently believed to connect more than 888 million users worldwide. In addition, in 2002, 31 billion email messages were sent per day. It is expected that by 2006, this number should reach 60 billion email messages per day.
- 43. Because the Internet merely links together numerous individual computers and computer networks, no single entity or group of entities controls the material made available on the Internet or limits the ability of others to access such materials. Rather, the range of digital information available to Internet users which includes text, images, sound and video is individually created, maintained, controlled and located on millions of separate individual computers around the world.

How People Access the Internet

- 44. Individuals have several easy means of gaining access to the Internet.

 Many educational institutions and businesses, including Plaintiffs, as well as local communities provide a variety of ways to allow users to easily access the Internet.
- 45. Almost all libraries provide their patrons with free access to the Internet through computers located at the library. Some libraries also host online discussion groups and chat rooms. Many libraries also post their card catalogs and online versions of material from their collections.

- 46. In the United States, most people access the Internet through companies known as Internet service providers ("ISPs"). Home Internet users are likely to contract on a monthly or annual basis with an ISP, and will access that ISP's network over a "dial-up" telephone line, or a higher-speed connection such as a cable "DSL," or wireless circuit. Some ISPs charge a monthly fee ranging from $15-50 monthly, but some provide their users with free or very low-cost Internet access. National "commercial online services," such as America Online, serve as ISPs and also provide subscribers with additional services, including access to extensive content within their own proprietary networks.
- 47. Similarly, businesses in the United States commonly contract with an ISP to provide Internet access to their employees, or to connect their internal computer network to the ISP's network (which is in turn connected to the greater Internet). Many businesses connect to their ISP's networks (and the Internet) over dedicated high-speed connections, while other businesses access the Internet over dial-up telephone lines.

Ways of Exchanging Information on the Internet

48. Users need not identify themselves to access most of the information on the Internet. Although in many (but not all) cases, users identify themselves to their ISPs (or their schools, employers or other entities providing Internet access), once connected to the Internet, the users generally do not need to identify themselves further in order to be able to access content on the Internet. Further, the user names or email addresses selected by many Internet users for their Internet communications seldom, if ever, provide enough information to indicate the users' real identities. Indeed, many user names are pseudonyms or pen names that often provide users with a distinct online identity and help to preserve their anonymity and privacy. America Online, for example, allows every subscriber to use up to six different "screen names," which may be used for different family members or for separate pseudonyms for a single individual.

- 49. Once an individual is connected to the Internet, there are a wide variety of methods for obtaining information, and for communicating with other users.
- 50. Email. The simplest and perhaps most widely used method of communication on the Internet is via electronic mail, commonly referred to as "email." Using one of many available "mailers" software capable of reading and writing an email a user is able to address and transmit via computer a message to a specific individual or group of individuals who have email addresses.
- 51. Discussion Groups. Online discussion groups are another of the most popular forms of communication via computer networks. Discussion groups allow users to post messages onto a public computerized "bulletin board" and to read and respond to messages posted by others in the discussion group. Discussion groups have been organized on many different computer networks and cover virtually every topic imaginable. Discussion groups can be formed by individuals, institutions or organizations or by particular computer networks.
- 52. "USENET" newsgroups are a popular set of discussion groups available on the Internet and other networks. Currently there are USENET newsgroups on more than 30,000 different subjects, and over 100,000 new messages are posted to these groups each day.

- 53. "Web logs" or "blogs" are another very popular form of discussion forum, in which one or a small number of "bloggers" can lead discussions on whatever topics concern the bloggers or the discussion group. Estimates of how many blogs exist today range from 10 to 50 million separate blogs available on the Internet.
- 54. Mailing Lists. Similarly, users also can communicate within a group by subscribing to automated electronic mailing lists that allow any subscriber to a mailing list to post a particular message that is then automatically distributed to all of the other subscribers on that list. These lists are sometimes called "mail exploders" or "listservs."
- 55. Chat Rooms. "Chat rooms" also allow users to engage in simultaneous conversations with another user or group of users by typing messages and reading the messages typed by others participating in the "chat." Chat rooms are available on the Internet and on commercial online services. Although chat rooms are often set up by particular organizations or networks, any individual user can start an online "chat."
- 56. Users of any of the above methods of Internet communication can send or view images as well as text, and images are frequently distributed via these media to users throughout the world.
- 57. Online discussion groups, mailing lists, and chat rooms create an entirely new global public forum a cyberspace village green where people can associate and communicate with others who have common interests and engage in discussion or debate on every imaginable topic.

The World Wide Web

58. The World Wide Web (the "Web") is the most popular way to provide and retrieve information on the Internet. Anyone with access to the Internet and proper software can create "webpages" or "homepages" which may contain many different types of digital information – text, images, sound and even video. The Web comprises hundreds of millions of separate "websites" and "webpages" that display content provided by particular persons or organizations. Any Internet user anywhere in the world with the proper software can create her own webpage, view webpages posted by others, and then read text, look at images and video and listen to sounds posted on these websites.

- 59. The Web serves in part as a global, online repository of knowledge, containing information from a diverse array of independent and distributed sources that are easily accessible to Internet users around the world. Though information on the Web is contained on millions of independent computers, each of these computers is connected to the Internet through communications "protocols" that allow the information on the Web to become part of an interconnected body of knowledge accessible by all webusers.
- 60. Many large corporations, banks, brokerage houses, newspapers and magazines now provide online editions of their publications and reports on the Web or operate independent websites. Many government agencies and courts also use the Web to disseminate information to the public. For example, defendants Mark Shurtleff and the District Attorney of Salt Lake County have posted Internet websites containing information available to the public, as have all of the plaintiffs. In addition, many individual users and small community organizations have established individualized homepages on the Web that provide information of interest to members of the particular organization, communities and to other individuals.

- 61. To gain access to the information available on the Web, a person generally uses a Web "browser" software such as Internet Explorer or Mozilla Firefox to display, print and download documents that are formatted in the standard Web formatting language. Generally, each document on the Web has an address that allows users to find and retrieve it, but some websites dynamically create addresses so that a given document may not always have the same address.
- or image that refer and link to another document. Typically the linked text is blue or underlined when displayed, and when selected by the user on her computer screen, the referenced document is automatically displayed, wherever in the world it actually is stored. Links, for example, are used to lead from overview documents to more detailed documents on the same website, from tables of contents to particular pages, and from text to cross-references, footnotes, and other forms of information. For example, plaintiff Utah ACLU's Web homepage provides links to several other webpages, including publications, press releases and legislative information.
- 63. Links may also take the user from the original website to another website on a different computer connected to the Internet, a computer that may be located in a different area of the country, or even the world. For example, plaintiff Utah ACLU's website links to the website of the National ACLU. This link appears seamless from the user's point of view; in fact the national website is located on an entirely separate computer that is not maintained or controlled by the Utah ACLU.
- 64. Through the use of these links from one computer to another, a user can move from one document to another, unifying the diverse and voluminous information made available by millions of users on the Internet into a single body of knowledge that can be searched and accessed.

65. A number of "search engines" and directories – such as Google and Yahoo – are available free of charge to help users navigate the World Wide Web. Once a user has accessed the search service, he or she simply types a word or string of words as a search request, and the search engine provides a list of websites that contain or relate to the search string.

The Interactive Character of Communication Over the Internet information and communicate via this new technology, the Internet is "interactive" in ways that distinguish it from traditional communication media. For instance, users are not passive receivers of information as with television and radio; rather, a user can easily respond to the material he or she receives or views online. In addition, "interactivity" means that Internet users must actively seek out with specificity the information they wish to retrieve and the kinds of communications in which they wish to engage. For example, to gain access to material on the World Wide Web, a user must know and type the address of a relevant website or find the website by typing a relevant search string in one of several available search engines or activate a website link. Similarly, a user wishing to view text posted to a newsgroup must log on to the Internet and then connect to a USENET server, select the relevant group, review the relevant header lines — which provide brief content descriptions — for each message and then access a particular message to read its content.

The Range of Content Available on the Internet

- 67. The information made available on the Internet is as diverse as human thought. Content on the Internet is provided by the millions of Internet users worldwide, and the content ranges from academic writings, to humor, to art, to literature, to medical information, to music, to news, to movie clips and to human sexuality. For example, on the Internet one can view the full text of the Bible, all of the works of Shakespeare and numerous other classic works of literature. One can browse through paintings from museums around the world, view in detail images of the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, watch or download motion pictures or hear selections from the latest rap music albums. At any one time, the Internet serves as the communication medium for literally hundreds of thousands of global conversations, political debates and social dialogues. It is a global art museum, movie theater, bookstore, research facility and Hyde Park.
- 68. Although the overwhelming majority of the websites on the Internet do not involve nudity or sexual activity, such material is available on the Internet. For example, an Internet user can read online John Cleland's eighteenth-century novel, Fanny Hill:

 Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure; view sixteenth-century Italian paintings of nude women, eighteenth-century Japanese erotic prints, and twentieth-century images; text discussing ways for married couples to improve their physical relationships, portraying methods of practicing safer sex, and depicting the method for conducting a breast self-examination and breast feeding; as well as commercial pornography. Much of this material is similar, if not identical, to material that is routinely discussed in cafes and on the street corners and distributed through libraries, bookstores, record stores and newsstands.

B. Technical Details About Internet and Web Communications

- 69. As discussed above, most people access the Internet through ISPs. A network of a typical ISP is in turn connected, directly or indirectly, to all other ISPs in the world, which are in turn connected to their customers. Collectively, all of these ISPs and their customers comprise the global Internet.
- 70. For accessing content on the World Wide Web, the most common sequence is for a user to request content from a website and for the website to return individual webpages to the user. This sequence is illustrated as follows, with the initial request shown by the arrows on the left, and the response shown by the arrows on the right:

- 71. In the vast majority of cases, the user's ISP is different from the website's ISP. Thus, the user's ISP does not typically have any knowledge of or relationship with the actual owner of the website.
- 72. Individuals, businesses, governments and other institutions (hereafter "web publishers") that want to make content broadly available over the Internet can do so by creating a website on the World Wide Web.
- 73. To make a website available on the World Wide Web, a web publisher must place the content or "webpages" onto a computer running specialized "web server" software. This computer, known as a "web server," transmits the requested webpages in response to requests sent by users on the Internet.

- 74. Web publishers have a variety of options for making a website available over a web server. First, a web publisher can own and operate a web server on the web publisher's premises (including, possibly, the web publisher's home). In this case, a web publisher would contract with an ISP for Internet access, and through that connection would connect the web server to the Internet.
- 75. Second, and far more commonly today, a web publisher may contract with a "web host" (or an ISP that also operates as a "web host") to own and operate the necessary web server on the web host's premises (or third party premises arranged by the web host). A web host will typically operate one or more web servers that can store the web pages for customers and make those web pages generally available to users on the Internet.
- 76. Typically, when creating a website, a web publisher obtains a "domain name" that can be used to designate and locate the website. For example, plaintiff THE SEXUAL HEALTH NETWORK, INC., obtained the domain name "sexualhealth.com" for use with its website.
- 77. A domain name can be coupled with additional information to create a "Uniform Resource Locator," or "URL," which represents a more complete way to designate the location of certain content or other resources on the Internet.
- 78. A URL is the commonly used textual designation of an Internet website's "address." Thus, for example, the URL of plaintiff's website referenced above is "http://www.sexualhealth.com." The "http" indicates that the "Hypertext Transfer Protocol" (the main protocol used to transmit World Wide Web pages) is to be used.

The "www.sexualhealth.com" indicates a name that can be used to locate the specific web server(s) that can contain the content for the requested website.

- 79. A web page accessed by a URL like "http://www.sexualhealth.com" is commonly referred to as the "homepage" of the website. A URL could also contain a reference to a specific "sub-page" that is contained in a website (such as "http://www.sexualhealth.com/aboutus.php"). A single website can contain thousands of different webpages. Although in many cases the same web publisher is responsible for all pages and sub-pages on a website, in other situations (including but not limited to that described in the following paragraph) wholly different and independent web publishers are responsible for different sub-pages on a single website.
- another common method to make webpages available on the World Wide Web. A web publisher can place content with a service provider that operates a "community" of users on the Internet and offers to host webpages of the users as part of its service (hereafter "Online Community"). This type of Online Community exists only in "cyberspace," and does not relate to any particular physical community. In the United States, for example, GeoCities is a popular Online Community, and GeoCities hosts webpages of its tens of thousands of users (which commonly are individuals, or very small businesses or organizations). There are also smaller Online Communities that individuals might host out of their homes. A key difference with publishing web content through an Online Community is that web publishers' webpages do not typically have their own domain name. For example, the Green Party of Ogden, Utah, is part of the GeoCities Online Community, and its webpages are available at the URL "http://www.geocities.com/greenpartyogden."

- 81. Although a URL such as http://www.sexualhealth.com or http://www.geocities.com/greenpartyogden provides enough information for a human user to access the desired Internet website, the URLs alone are not sufficient for the user's computer to locate the website. The user's computer must first determine the numeric "Internet Protocol Address" or "IP Address" of the desired website. When a user seeks to access a particular URL, the user's computer does a "look up" through a hierarchy of global databases to determine the IP Address of the computer server that can provide the desired webpages.
- 82. In the most commonly used method, IP Addresses are expressed as a series of four numbers separated by periods. Thus, for example, the IP Address of the website designated by http://www.sexualhealth.com is 72.3.225.42. This numeric IP Address provides a user's computer with a precise address of the web server to which the user's computer must send a request for web pages with the URL http://www.sexualhealth.com.
- 83. Most ISPs receive and forward Internet communications based solely on the IP Address of the destination of the communication, wholly without regard to the specific content of the communication. Thus, a typical ISP would handle an email message addressed to a specific IP Address in exactly the same way that it would handle a webpage that is being sent to the same IP Address.
- 84. Indeed, for most ISPs, the network does not "read" or analyze the content of the communication in order to be able to determine whether the communication was an email, a webpage or some other type of Internet communication. Moreover, the networks of most ISPs do not include the physical equipment that would be necessary to analyze every communication passing through the network, and do not have the ability to take any action based on the content of the communication.

- 85. Although a specific URL in general refers only to one specific website, the same is not true for IP Addresses there is not a one-to-one correlation between URLs and IP Addresses. An individual web server computer with a single IP Address can "host" tens, hundreds, thousands or even hundreds of thousands of different websites. Thus, many different websites (each with their own unique URLs) can be hosted on the same physical web server, and all can share the same IP Address of that web server.
- 86. For example, 216.185.128.200 is the IP Address of the website www.andrewmccullough.org. But that exact same numeric IP Address is also used by more than 34,000 other wholly unrelated websites (including, for example, the websites of a Valley winemaker, a Phoenix bookstore, www.anasazibooks.com, a Wisconsin scuba diving club, www. 4seasonsscubadivers.com, and a Missouri religious ministry site, www. 70x7ministries.org). If a user on the Internet seeks to access the www.andrewmccullough.org_website, the user's ISP knows only that the user is sending a communication to 216.185.128.200. The user's ISP does not "open" or "read" the communication to determine which specific website is actually being requested.
- 87. Although ISPs transport most Internet communications without looking at any information other than the IP Address, a web server that supports multiple websites does "read" the full web request in order to determine which website is being requested. In the example of www.andrewmccullough.org, the web server located at 216.185.128.200 will read any web request it receives to determine which of the thousands of websites located at that address should be provided.

- C. The Provisions of the Amended Act
- 88. The Amended Act has a number of different coordinating and overlapping provisions. The Complaint challenges four components as detailed below:
- 89. Extension of Utah Harmful-to-Minors Materials Law to the Internet.

 Section 5 (amending Utah Code § 76-10-1206) expands existing Utah law with respect to distribution to minors of "harmful to minors" material to include Internet content publishers and ISPs. Plaintiffs challenge this section as unconstitutional.
- 90. As noted above, H.B. 5 amended the language of § 76-10-1206 by changing a reference to a "prurient interest in sex of minors" to a "prurient interest in sex with minors." This change creates significant confusion as to the meaning of that statutory section, but in any event is unconstitutional.
- 91. Mandatory Labeling. Section 9 enacts Utah Code § 76-10-1233, which requires Utah-connected Internet content providers to self-evaluate and label the content of their speech, at the risk of criminal punishment. Plaintiffs challenge this section as unconstitutional. This provision was not altered by H.B. 5.
- 92. Mandated ISP Blocking of "Pornographic" Material as Determined by the ISP's Customers. Section 4 amends Utah Code § 76-10-1205 and effectively requires ISPs to block access to "any pornographic material or material reasonably believed by [a customer] to be pornographic." Plaintiffs challenge this section as unconstitutional.

- 93. H.B. 5 amended § 76-10-1205 but did so in such a way as to broaden its unconstitutional reach. As originally amended by H.B. 260, § 76-10-1205 unconstitutionally applied to Internet Service Providers. As amended by H.B. 5, § 76-10-1205 unconstitutionally applies to both Internet Service Providers and Web Hosting providers. Plaintiffs challenge both aspects of the revised § 76-10-1205 as unconstitutional.
- 94. Mandated ISP Blocking of Harmful-to-Minors Material. Section 7 enacts Utah Code § 76-10-1231, which requires ISPs to block access to "harmful to minors" material. Plaintiffs challenge this section as unconstitutional.
- 95. H.B. 5 amended § 76-10-1231 by incorporating language suggested by plaintiffs to ensure that the First Amendment rights of customers of ISPs are not violated pursuant to this section. As amended, however, § 76-10-1231 continues to violate the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution and is challenged here as unconstitutional.
- 96. Since plaintiffs were successful in having the provisions relating to the Adult Content Registry repealed, plaintiffs' challenge of those provisions in the Complaint is now moot.
- 97. Some but not all of the challenged sections that impose obligations on ISPs to block access to certain content are triggered by the affirmative requests of individual customers of the ISPs. Because of the technical realities of the Internet and the operations of most ISPs, in many circumstances the ISPs will implement any blocking across their entire network and thus the access to lawful websites by non-requesting customers will also be blocked. For this and other reasons, the "customer choice" approach does not cure the constitutional defects raised in this Complaint.

98. Many of the obligations imposed on ISPs by the Amended Act can be satisfied if an ISP provides to a requesting customer filtering software that the customer can install on his or her own computer. Although plaintiffs believe that governmental promotion of the voluntary use of such filtering software is a constitutionally less restrictive alternative to the challenged sections of the Amended Act, ISPs are specifically given the option by the Amended Act of blocking access to websites using technical means that will also block access to unrelated sites. For this and other reasons, the inclusion of the "filtering software option" does not eliminate the overall unconstitutional impact of the challenged sections under both the First Amendment to and the Commerce Clause of, the U.S. Constitution.

D. Impact of the Amended Act on Internet Speech and Communications in General, and on the Plaintiffs in Particular

99. The harmful impacts of the Amended Act on Internet speech in general, and on the plaintiffs in particular, are far reaching. Because the Amended Act is multifaceted, the impacts on speech are discussed below with regard to each of the four different facets of the Amended Act challenged in this Amended Complaint. Following that is a discussion of the impact on interstate commerce that flows from all of the challenged sections of the Amended Act. Concluding is a discussion of the impact on the individual plaintiffs.

The Amended Act's Impact on Internet Speech

Extension of Utah Harmful-to-Minors Materials Law to the Internet (Section 5, Utah Code § 76-10-1206)

100. Because of the nature of the Internet, this section of the Amended Act bans certain constitutionally-protected speech among adults and substantially burdens the dissemination and receipt of other constitutionally protected speech. The exact nature of the ban and burden depends on the meaning of the Of/with Amendment. The uncertainty of the meaning of the Of/with Amendment raises issues of unconstitutional vagueness.

- 101. The United States Congress and the states of Arizona, Michigan, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin previously enacted laws similar to these sections of the Amended Act (other than the Of/with Amendment), which either were held unconstitutional or enjoined on First Amendment and Commerce Clause grounds.
- 102. Speech on the Internet is generally available to anyone with access to basic communications technology. Anyone who posts content to the Web, chat rooms, mailing lists or discussion groups makes that content automatically available to all users worldwide, including minors. Because minors have access to all of these fora, any "harmful to minors" communication in these fora could be punishable under the Amended Act. Knowledge that the recipient is a minor is not required under the Amended Act, and knowledge of the "character and content" of the material is presumed. Due to the very nature of the Internet, virtually every communication on the Internet may potentially be received by a minor and therefore may potentially be the basis for prosecution.
- 103. Because many of the terms in the Amended Act are overbroad, the Amended Act further chills the speech of content providers on the Web. For example, the Amended Act fails to distinguish between material that is "harmful" for older as opposed to younger minors. And the meaning of the Of/with Amendment is unclear.

- 104. Further, the reference to "prevailing standards in the adult community [in the State of Utah] as a whole with respect to what is suitable material for minors" is overbroad because, due to the borderless nature of the Internet, it effectively imposes Utah standards on content providers and users in all other states even if other states have more liberal standards regarding what is considered "harmful to minors." As a consequence, content providers and users of the Web will likely err on the side of caution and not post content on the Web that they would otherwise have posted. In this way, the Amended Act chills speech on the Web and thus causes irreparable harm to the First Amendment freedoms of online speakers.
- 105. Many of the hundreds of millions of users of the Internet, including Plaintiffs and their members and users, are speakers and content providers subject to the Amended Act. Anyone who sends an email, participates in a discussion group or chat room, or maintains a homepage on the Web potentially is subject to the Amended Act, because his or her communication might be accessed by a minor in the State of Utah. Given the technology of the Internet, there are no reasonable means for these speakers to ascertain the age of persons who access their messages, or for restricting or preventing access by minors to certain content. From the perspective of these speakers, the information they make available on the public spaces of the Internet either must be made available to all users of the Internet, including users who may be minors, or it will not be made available at all.
- 106. For instance, when a user posts a message to a USENET discussion group, it is automatically distributed to hundreds of thousands of computers around the world, and the speaker has no ability to control who will access his or her message from those computers. Similarly, users who communicate on mailing lists have no way to determine the ages of other subscribers to the list. Finally, content providers on the Web have no reasonable way to verify the age of persons who access their websites. For these reasons, there is no practical way for content providers to withhold material that may be "harmful to minors" – as prohibited by the Amended Act – from people younger than 18 years old.

- 107. Moreover, the Amended Act is overbroad because it allows prosecution even if the sender had no knowledge or reason to know of the recipient's age. Although knowledge of the "character and content" of the material is required, knowledge that the recipient is a minor is not required; simple negligence is sufficient.
- 108. Because Internet speakers have no means to restrict minors in Utah from accessing their communications, the Amended Act effectively requires almost all discourse on the Internet whether among citizens of Utah or among users anywhere in the world to be at a level suitable for young children. The Amended Act therefore bans an entire category of constitutionally protected speech between and among adults on the Internet.
- 109. In addition, any person who disagrees with, or objects to, sexual content on the Internet could cause a speaker to be prosecuted under the Amended Act by having a minor view the online speech, resulting in a "heckler's veto" of Internet speech.

 Further, any person who disagrees with sexual content on the Internet could cause a speaker to fear prosecution under the Amended Act by claiming to be a minor, whether or not the person actually is one.

- 110. The Amended Act also prohibits older minors from communicating and accessing protected speech. Even if some depictions or discussions of nudity and sexual conduct may be considered by some to be inappropriate or "harmful" for younger minors, many depictions and discussions including safer sex resources are valuable, at least for older minors.
- 111. Even if there were means by which speakers on the Internet could ascertain or verify the age of persons who receive their content (and there are no such means), requiring users to identify themselves and to disclose personal information in order to allow verification of age would prevent Internet users from maintaining their privacy and anonymity on the Internet.
- 112. Because of the global nature of the Internet, defendants cannot demonstrate that these sections of the Amended Act are likely to reduce the availability in Utah of material that may be "harmful to minors" on the Internet.
- 113. It is estimated that in excess of 40% of the content provided on the Internet originates abroad. All of the content on the global Internet is equally available to all Internet users worldwide and may be accessed as easily and as cheaply as content that originates locally. Because it is not technologically possible to prevent content posted abroad from being available to Internet users in the State of Utah, these sections of the Amended Act will not accomplish their purported purpose of keeping inappropriate content from minors in Utah.
- 114. Conversely, there are many alternative means that are more effective at assisting parents in limiting a minor's access to certain material, if desired.

- 115. Some ISPs and commercial online services like America Online provide features that subscribers may use to prevent children from accessing chat rooms and to block access to websites and news groups based on keywords, subject matter, or other designations. These services also offer screening software that blocks messages containing certain words and tracking and monitoring software to determine which resources a particular online user, such as a child, has accessed. They also offer children-only discussion groups that are closely monitored by adults.
- 116. Online users also can purchase special software applications, known as user-based filtering software, that enable them to control access to online resources.

 These applications allow users to block access to certain websites and resources, to prevent children from giving personal information to strangers by email or in chat rooms and to keep a log of all online activity that occurs on the home computer.
- 117. User-based blocking programs are not perfect, both because they fail to screen all inappropriate material and because they inadvertently block valuable Internet websites. However, a voluntary decision by concerned parents to use these products for their children constitutes a far less restrictive alternative than the Amended Act's imposition of criminal penalties for protected speech upon the universe of Internet users. Moreover, the Amended Act itself demonstrates that the voluntary use by customers of filtering software would satisfy the governmental interests sought to be advanced by the Amended Act.

Mandated ISP Blocking of "Pornographic" Material as Determined by the ISP's Customers (Section 4, Utah Code § 76-10-1205)

- 118. Although the meaning of Section 76-10-1205 as amended is far from clear, the section appears to permit (a) individual customers of an ISP to designate websites to be blocked by the ISP (so long as the customers "reasonably believed" the website to be "pornographic"), and (b) individual Internet users to require a web host to block access to a particular site (again, so long as the users "reasonably believed" the site to be "pornographic"). Allowing individual customers to impose blocking obligations on ISPs creates significant constitutional problems.
- 119. Most ISPs cannot as a technical matter effectively comply with a requirement to block specific websites designated by individual customers by blocking content based on the specific URL of a website or a webpage. To effectively comply with the blocking requirement, most ISPs can only block access to a website by blocking access to the numeric Internet Protocol Address ("IP Address") of the website.
- 120. To effectively comply with the blocking requirement, most ISPs would be forced to create an "exception" in a "routing table" in order to "null route" or "mis-route" Internet traffic associated with the IP Address.
- 121. Blocking access to an IP Address will block access to all websites that use that IP Address, including websites that are wholly unrelated to any URLs designated by a customer.
- 122. The sharing of IP Addresses among wholly unrelated websites is a very common practice on the Internet today.

123. According to recent research, over 85% of all Internet websites that have domain names ending in ".com," ".net" or ".org" share their IP Addresses with at least one other Internet website.

124. According to recent research, over 66% of all Internet websites that have domain names ending in ".com," ".net" or ".org" share their IP Addresses with at least fifty other Internet websites.

125. In some cases, hundreds, thousands and even hundreds of thousands of websites share a single IP Address.

126. In most cases, the websites that share their IP Address with dozens or hundreds of other websites have no affiliation or relationship with the other websites that share their IP Address.

127. Internet websites that carry hard core pornographic sexual content can share their IP Address with unrelated non-sexual websites.

128. IP Address 69.46.230.80 provides a good illustration of IP Address sharing.

That IP Address is used by over 16,000 unrelated websites including a variety of hardcore sexually oriented websites, such as:

www.4dirtypics.com www.adultlovecam.com www. adulttoystore.org www.aqua-sex.com

www. asian-women-schoolgirls-pussy-pics-free-sex-porn-pics.com as well as a diversity of websites that are wholly non-sexual, including:

www.abqmennonite.org (church in New Mexico)
www.adirondackprinters.com (printer repair in New York)
www.african-drums.com (online drum store) www.alicebrentano.net (real estate agent in Kansas) www.alphabetmoon.com (children's accessories store in Texas)

www.amazinggraceministries.net (missionary organization in Massachusetts) www.arkansasfoosball.com (marketing a foosball book) www.attorneypaulgold.com (attorney in Kentucky) www.bagelsandbeyond.com (bagel store in Massachusetts) www bedrijvenparknieuwland.com (industrial park in the Netherlands).

- 129. If any one of the 16,000+ websites that use IP Address 69.46.230.80 is designated by a customer, the actions of ISPs to comply with their blocking obligation would block access to all 16,000+ websites. Thus, a requirement to block access to, for example, "www.4dirtypics.com" would result in the blocking of "www.amazinggraceministries.net," "www.bagelsandbeyond.com" and thousands of other unrelated websites.
- 130. Blocking obligations imposed on most ISPs targeting any particular URL are very likely to lead to the blocking of access to wholly unrelated websites that share the IP Address of the targeted URL.
- 131. As an alternative to blocking by Internet Protocol Address, the Amended Act permits ISPs to block by "domain name." If ISPs sought to comply with the Amended Act by blocking by domain name, they would "spoil" or manipulate a data table used in the "domain name lookup" process.
- 132. Such an approach would still result in the blocking of access to lawful Internet content, because under such an approach the ISP would have to block access to all portions of a website, even if only one portion of a website was designated by a customer. For example, the Geocities Online Community has thousands of unrelated websites all hosted under the www.geocities.com domain name. Thus, if an ISP were required to block access to hardcore or adult oriented websites in the Geocities community (such as http://www.geocities.com/prinfostes/prinfostes.htm, http://www.geocities.com/webcamsexian/lesbian-hot-sex-cams.html and www.geocities.com/penelope4515/six_sex_scenes/index.htm), the ISP would also block access to thousands of unrelated websites, including for example www.geocities.com/ldsdemocrats/index.html (a political website aimed at Mormons) and www.geocities.com/saltlakeseagullsafc/saltlakeseagulls.html (a Salt Lake City sports club).

- 133. Although many ISPs could attempt to block access to a website by its IP

 Address or possibly by its domain name, some ISPs for some or all of their customers have no technical means by which they could attempt to block access to a website.

- 134. For many regional or national ISPs, any action taken to comply with blocking obligations under the Amended Act will affect the Internet access of customers both in Utah and in other states around the country (and in some cases in other countries). In other words, content blocked as a result of the Amended Act will be blocked far outside of Utah's borders.
- 135. Specifically, the blocking of websites challenged in this Amended Complaint would have a direct and significant harmful effect on interstate and foreign commerce and communications. In almost all (if not all) cases, the blocking provisions challenged in this Amended Complaint interfere with the ability of Internet users located outside of Utah to access content also located outside of Utah. In most cases, the communications obstructed by the Amended Act would have taken place (but for the Amended Act) entirely outside of the borders of Utah.
- 136. Wholly innocent and completely lawful websites on the Internet would be blocked if ISPs comply with the Amended Act by blocking access to websites.

- 137. In addition to constitutional problems raised by the application of § 76-10-1205 to Internet Service Providers, a separate set of problems are raised by application of this section to Web Hosting companies (including plaintiffs). Although the intent of the legislature in extending § 76-10-1205 to either ISPs or Web Hosts is unclear, the section, as amended, appears to enable users in Utah to demand that a web hosting company remove a sexually oriented web site from its web servers.
- 138. Such an obligation violates the constitutional rights of the web hosting company, of web sites, and of Internet users (both in and outside of Utah) whose access to web sites would be blocked pursuant to this section.

Mandated ISP Blocking of Harmful-to-Minors Material (Section 7, Utah Code § 76-10-1231)

139. The effective blocking obligation imposed under this section will have all of the impacts described above with reference to § 76-10-1205, except that, under Section 7, the ISP will be required to block access to vast numbers of websites on the Internet. Thus, it is unavoidable that a significant amount of constitutionally-protected non-harmful-to-minors content also will be blocked. Moreover, the actions of many ISPs to block access to harmful to minors content will result in blocking access for all of the customers of the ISP.

Mandatory Labeling (Section 9, Utah Code § 76-10-1233)

140. Section 9 of the Amended Act effectively requires that Utah-located or connected websites and other Internet content publishers either to technically block access by minors to content that is harmful to minors, or to "label" material that is harmful to minors as being harmful to minors. The obligation to block access by minors suffers from all of the same problems discussed above with regard to Sections 3 and 5 of the Amended Act. In addition, the obligation to "label" material as harmful to minors constitutes "compelled speech" in violation of the First Amendment.

The Amended Act's Burden on Interstate Commerce

- 141. The Amended Act impacts the speech of online speakers across the nation not just in the State of Utah because it is impossible for Internet users to determine the geographic location of persons who access their information. Internet users elsewhere have no way to determine whether information posted to the Web, discussion groups, or chat rooms will be accessed by persons residing in the State of Utah. The various websites on the Internet can be accessed by anyone in the world; therefore, there is no way for speakers to ensure that residents of Utah will not receive their communications. Thus, all users, even if they do not reside in Utah or intend to communicate with residents of Utah, must comply with the Amended Act.
- 142. The Amended Act unjustifiably burdens interstate commerce and regulates conduct that occurs wholly outside the State of Utah. The Amended Act chills speakers outside of Utah and curtails speech that occurs wholly outside the borders of Utah, thereby causing irreparable harm. Like the nation's railways and highways, the Internet is by its nature an instrument of interstate commerce. Just as goods and services travel over state borders by train and truck, information flows across state (and national) borders on the Internet. Internet content providers that are located outside of Utah, such as The Sexual Health Network, as well as people participating in chat rooms, newsgroups or mail exploders, have no feasible way to determine whether their information will be accessed or downloaded by someone who is located in Utah. Just as a user of the Internet cannot identify the age of another user of the Internet, one also cannot identify where a particular user or speaker resides, or from where a particular user may be accessing or downloading information on the Internet.

- 143. Due to the nature of the technology, a non-Utahan, even if he or she has no desire to reach anyone in Utah, will be forced to self-censor his or her speech on the Internet in order to comply with the Amended Act and avoid the possibility that a minor from Utah will gain access to this information, thereby subjecting the speaker to prosecution in Utah. In addition, because more than one website is often on a server, blocking a single website will often block many more non-offending websites. As a regional or national ISP typically cannot restrict blocking to Utah users only, such non-offending websites also will be blocked as to users of that ISP in the rest of the United States. Therefore, the Amended Act interferes significantly with the interstate flow of information and with interstate commerce.
- 144. Moreover, interstate and international computer communications networks like the nation's railroads constitute an area of the economy and society that particularly demands uniform rules and regulations. The states of New York, New Mexico, Arizona, Wisconsin, Vermont, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Michigan and South

 Carolina previously enacted laws similar to the Amended Act, which were enjoined on Commerce Clause grounds because of the inconsistent obligations imposed on online speakers across the country.

- 145. Because the definition of "harmful to minors" in Utah Code § 76-10-1201(4) depends in part upon "prevailing standards in the adult community" in the State of Utah as a whole, the Amended Act effectively imposes regulations on interstate speech that conflict with the community standards of other States and their local communities. If each state implements its own regulations, as Utah has done, regarding what information can be legally distributed via this new technology, interstate commerce will be greatly inhibited and disrupted as persons around the world try to discern what can and cannot be communicated in the many different jurisdictions connected to these networks.

The Amended Act's Impact on the Plaintiffs

146. Plaintiffs interact with and use the Internet in a wide variety of ways, including as content providers, access providers and users. The Amended Act burdens plaintiffs in all of these capacities. Plaintiffs who are users and content providers are subject to the Amended Act. These plaintiffs fear prosecution under the Amended Act for communicating, sending, displaying or distributing material that might be deemed by some to be "harmful to minors" under the Amended Act. They also fear liability for material posted by others to their online discussion groups, chat rooms, mailing lists and websites. Plaintiffs have no way to avoid prosecution under the Amended Act and are left with two equally untenable alternatives: (i) risk prosecution under the Amended Act, or (ii) attempt to engage in self-censorship and thereby deny adults and older minors access to constitutionally protected material.

The King's English Bookshop

147. Plaintiff The King's English Bookshop was founded in Salt Lake City in 1978. The King's English website, kingsenglish.booksense.com, provides information about books, including pictures of bookcovers and detailed descriptions of book contents provided by Booksense, a national service for independent booksellers. The website also includes the store's newsletter which offers book reviews, photos, information about upcoming events and other local items.

- 148. The King's English sells books covering a variety of topics, some of which contain sexual content. It carries, recommends and sells, for instance, such classics as D. H. Lawrence's Lady Chatterly's Lover and Gustave Flaubert's Madame Bovary; contemporary classics from Henry Miller's Tropic of Capricorn to Doris Lessing's The Golden Notebooks to Vladimir Nabokov's Lolita; more recent fiction such as Isabel Allende's The Stories of Eva Luna, Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale, Michael Ondaatje's The English Patient, Mark Spragg's The Fruit of Stone; and non-fiction, an example of which is Our Bodies Ourselves put out by the Boston Women's Collective and recently re-issued. These and other books that the King's English carries, when recommended on-line, could be described in ways that depict nudity and/or sexual conduct; an example is Margaret Atwood's most recent novel Oryx and Crake, which John Updike called "brilliant," and the Christian Science Monitor described as 'bewitching"; the cover features two nude female torsos joined as one. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, the store will be inhibited from posting constitutionally protected material on its website and may have to reconsider use of Booksense or any similar national web service. The King's English Bookshop fears prosecution under the Amended Act if it does not self-censor.
- 149. Because of how the online Booksense system operates, it would be practically impossible for The King's English to review and "label" all of the content on its website.

Sam Weller's Zion Bookstore

- 150. Plaintiff Sam Weller's Zion Bookstore was established in Salt Lake City in 1929. The World Wide Web provides Sam Weller's Zion Bookstore with the opportunity to offer its books for sale over the Internet. In addition to selling books over the Internet, Sam Weller's also publishes a bi-monthly newsletter about books, book reviews and lists store events on its website.
- 151. Some of the books made available through www.samwellers.com contain references to nudity and sexual conduct. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, Sam Weller's would be forced to risk criminal prosecution for providing constitutionally protected speech on the Internet about books that it routinely sells from its store, or to self-censor its website to remove all references to nudity and sexual conduct. Sam Weller's is considering joining a national web service, such as Booksense, but is concerned as to whether it will subject the firm to prosecution under the Amended Act. This would prevent, for example, individuals looking for information about sexual health or gay and lesbian issues from obtaining access to valuable resources available through the Internet.
- 152. Because of the volume and dynamic nature of the content on its website, it would be extremely burdensome if not impossible for Sam Weller's to review and "label" all of the content on its website.

Nathan Florence

153. Plaintiff Nathan Florence believes that the World Wide Web provides a unique and low-cost opportunity to exhibit his work to both local communities and to the world. Some of his art depicts nude figures in a tradition that is centuries old. For example, some of his paintings depict nude women in various positions.

154. Mr. Florence uses his website to display his art, and is worried that some of the depictions of nude figures, as well as other aspects of his art, might be considered in violation of provisions of the Amended Act. Because he is uncertain what will be considered in violation of the Amended Act, he would have to self-censor, shut down his website entirely, or risk criminal prosecution for providing constitutionally-protected artistic expression.

W. Andrew McCullough

155. Plaintiff Andrew McCullough has been, and likely will be again, a candidate for Attorney General of Utah, and operates a campaign website at www.andrewmccullough.org. This website contains no content that could be considered harmful to minors. The website is, however, hosted on a Web Server located at IP Address 216.185.128.200, along with more than 34,000 other unrelated websites, including sexually oriented websites such as www.adultozone.com, www.247porn.net, adult-sex-videos-toys.com and www.adultdvddeals.com. If an ISP takes technical action to block access to these or other sexually oriented websites located at IP Address 216.185.128.200, it is very likely that access to www.andrewmccullough.org will also be blocked. Thus, McCullough fears that his website will be blocked as a result of actions by ISPs to comply with the Amended Act.

CSolutions

156. Plaintiff IPNS of Utah, LLC is both an Internet service provider and a hosting company as defined in the Amended Act. As such, all of the challenged provisions of the Amended Act apply to or affect CSolutions. Complete compliance with Utah Code §§ 76-10-1204, 76-10-1205, 76-10-1206, and 76-10-1231 as enacted or amended by the Amended Act may not be possible, and thus CSolutions reasonably fears prosecution under or application of any of those sections to CSolutions. If compliance with those sections is possible, it would be burdensome and costly, and would adversely harm the ability of CSolutions' customers to access constitutionally protected content on the Internet.

157. As a hosting company, the web hosting customers of CSolutions would be subject to Utah Code § 76-10-1233. That section harms CSolutions' ability to compete for and retain customers, and it harms the customers' constitutional rights to post content on the Internet.

RigidTech.com, Inc.

158. Plaintiff RigidTech.com, Inc. ("RigidTech") is both an Internet service provider and a hosting company as defined in the Amended Act. As such, all of the challenged provisions of the Amended Act apply to or affect RigidTech. Complete compliance with Utah Code §§ 76-10-1204, 76-10-1205, 76-10-1206, and 76-10-1231, as enacted or amended by the Amended Act may not be possible, and thus RigidTech reasonably fears prosecution under or application of any of those sections to RigidTech. If compliance with those sections is possible, it would be burdensome and costly, and would adversely harm the ability of RigidTech customers to access constitutionally protected content on the Internet.

159. As a hosting company, the web hosting customers of RigidTech would be subject to Utah Code § 76-10-1233. That section harms RigidTech ability to compete for and retain customers, and it harms the customers' constitutional rights to post content on the Internet.

The Sexual Health Network

- 160. Plaintiff The Sexual Health Network's Web website (sexualhealth.com) includes a wide array of sex education materials for people with disabilities and chronic diseases. Some resources are written specifically for The Sexual Health Network, while other materials are adapted from a variety of sources. Topics covered include both general matters (such as information about the effects of aging on sexuality, or ideas to help increase women's sexual pleasure), to disability-specific issues (such as sexual positions that may enhance intercourse for individuals with particular disabilities, or advice on dealing with low sexual self-esteem that may accompany a disability).
- 161. The articles and other information available on sexualhealth.com necessarily involve the use of sexually explicit language and visual images. Frank, detailed explanations are given in order for the information that the website provides to be useful to its viewers.
- 162. Sexual Health Network publishes a monthly newsletter that is sent to thousands of subscribers.
- 163. The Sexual Health Network's website offered co-branded content, such as webcasts that are produced by Healthology (a health-related website), that are accessible by clicking on links or banners on Sexual Health Network's website.
- 164. The Sexual Health Network's website also provides links to other sexualityrelated websites such as the Sinclair Intimacy Institute (producers of explicit educational videos designed to help couples improve their sex lives).

- 165. The Sexual Health Network fears that making the materials on the sexualhealth.com website available online could be alleged to constitute "distribution" of "harmful to minors" material and thus subject it to prosecution under the Amended Act.
- 166. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, the Sexual Health Network must choose between risking criminal prosecution or curtailing its speech by removing from its website any material that could be alleged to be "harmful to minors."

Utah Progressive Network Education Fund, Inc.

167. Plaintiff Utah Progressive Network Education Fund, Inc. ("UPNet") is a coalition of organizations and individuals committed to promoting social, racial, economic and environmental justice, and operates a website at www.upnet.org. This website contains no content that could be considered "harmful to minors." The website is, however, hosted on a web server located at IP Address 216.194.122.30, along with more than 1,500 other unrelated websites, including sexually oriented websites such as www.second-cumming.com. If an ISP takes technical action to block access to this or other sexually oriented websites located at IP Address 216.194.122.30, it is very likely that access to www.upnet.org will also be blocked. Thus, UPNet fears that its website will be blocked as a result of actions by ISPs to comply with the Amended Act.

American Booksellers Foundation for Free Expression

168. Plaintiff ABFFE has hundreds of bookseller members who are located from coast to coast, as well as in the State of Utah, many of whom sell materials that contain descriptions or depictions of nudity or sexual conduct, and which deal frankly with the subject of human sexuality. ABFFE's members are not "adult bookstores." Many member bookstores use the Internet and electronic communications to obtain information and excerpts of books from publishers. For example, member booksellers may review current popular titles such as Nymph by Francesa Lia Block, Pictures & Passion: A History of Homosexuality in the Visual Arts by James W. Saslow, American Pastoral by Philip Roth and The Joy of Sex, which include passages or images describing nudity and sexual conduct. Some member bookstores also have their own webpages that discuss the contents of books sold in stores.

169. ABFFE members' right to learn about, acquire and distribute material describing or depicting nudity and sexual conduct, and their patrons' right to purchase such materials, will be seriously infringed by the Amended Act if it is not enjoined because ABFFE members and the publishers with whom they transact business will be forced to self-censor or risk prosecution under the Amended Act.

American Civil Liberties Union of Utah

170. Plaintiff ACLU of Utah not only works to uphold the Bill of Rights, but also devotes considerable resources to public education about civil liberties. The ACLU of Utah maintains a website (www.acluutah.org) that offers electronic copies of the affiliate's publications, reports, legal documents, press releases and other material related to its legal, legislative, educational and advocacy work. The website is updated at least weekly, and often daily. Some of the ACLU of Utah's online resources contain sexual subject matter. Examples include copies of ACLU of Utah and ACLU court briefs in cases involving arts censorship, obscenity, sex education, privacy rights and discrimination against gays and lesbians. Additionally, the ACLU of Utah's website links to national ACLU's extensive online resources.

171. The ACLU of Utah does not moderate its computer communications systems because such editing or censorship would be antithetical to the organization's belief in freedom of speech. Furthermore, the ACLU of Utah considers minors to be an important audience for its online resources. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, the ACLU of Utah fears that it would be compelled either to refrain from offering constitutionally protected civil liberties materials or to face potential criminal prosecution.

Association of American Publishers, Inc.

- 172. Plaintiff AAP sues on behalf of its members who are content providers and users of the Internet. Although their businesses are primarily based on print publishing, AAP's members are very actively involved in the Internet. AAP's members create electronic products to accompany and supplement their printed books and journals; create custom educational material on the Internet; communicate with authors and others, receive manuscripts, and edit, typeset, and design books electronically; transmit finished products to licensed end-user customers, communicate with bookstores and other wholesale and retail accounts; and promote authors and titles online.
- 173. Many of AAP's members have webpages and provide information to the world on the Internet. Some of the content provided by AAP's members contains nudity or sexual conduct. Many of the efforts to ban books in various communities have been directed at books published by AAP's members, and AAP fears that the Amended Act will spawn similar efforts directed at AAP's online publishing. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, AAP members will be forced either to risk criminal liability or to stop providing online access to constitutionally protected books and other related materials.

The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund

174. The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund ("CBLDF") represents over 1000 comic book authors, artists, retailers, distributors, publishers and readers located in Utah and the rest of the United States. Comics are a graphic-based art form that has rapidly adapted its content and commerce for the Internet. Today, the largest individual retailers of comic books in the United States are Internet-based, while thousands of "web comics" artists are posting work every year. Some of their material involves frank sexual content or depictions of nudity. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, CBLDF and its members are concerned that they will have either to risk criminal liability or self-censor constitutionally protected material.

Freedom to Read Foundation, Inc.

175. FTRF includes among its members librarians and public and non-public libraries that serve their patrons with access to and content on the Internet. Almost all libraries provide their patrons with facilities to access the Internet for free or at a low cost. Most libraries also have their own websites and use the Internet for such things as posting catalogues of library materials, posting information about current events, sponsoring chat rooms, providing textual information or art and posting online versions of materials from their library collections. Patrons can, for example, access the website of certain libraries from anywhere in the country to peruse the libraries' catalogues, review an encyclopedia reference or check a definition in a dictionary.

176. Some of the materials provided or made available by libraries contain nudity or sexual conduct. For example, FTRF member libraries' online card catalogues include such works as Forever by Judy Blume, Women on Top by Nancy Friday, Changing Bodies, Changing Lives by Ruth Bell, Our Bodies, Our Selves by the Boston Women's Health Collective and It's Perfectly Normal by Robie Harris.

177. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, libraries will be inhibited from both posting and providing access to materials on the Internet that describe or depict nudity or sexual conduct. Adult library patrons and Internet users would thus be deprived of access to these constitutionally protected library materials. Given the global and unrestricted nature of the Internet and the past attempts by persons to bar literature and reference items from library collections, many of FTRF's members may choose not to post a substantial amount of expressive material at all – material that many adults might consider useful for themselves or their own children – rather than risk prosecution for posting material that might be illegal under the Amended Act in Utah.

Publishers' Marketing Association

178. Publishers Marketing Association ("PMA") was founded in California in 1983 to represent and serve book, audio and video independent publishers. It now has more than 3,900 publisher members in the United States and Canada, primarily publishers of non-fiction. Thirty of its members are located in Utah.

179. Plaintiff PMA sues on behalf of its members who are content providers and users of the Internet. Although their businesses are primarily based on publishing, many of PMA's members are very actively involved in the Internet. They communicate with authors and others, receive manuscripts, and edit, typeset, and design books electronically; transmit finished products to licensed end-user customers, communicate with bookstores and other wholesale and retail accounts; promote authors and titles; and market titles online.

180. Many of PMA's members have webpages and provide information to the world on the Internet. Some of the content provided by PMA's members contains descriptions or depictions of nudity or sexual conduct. If the Amended Act is not enjoined, members of PMA will be forced either to risk criminal liability or to stop providing online access to constitutionally protected books and other related materials.

COUNT I

Violation of Adults' Rights Under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution

- 181. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 182. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution on its face and as applied because it effectively bans and/or unduly burdens constitutionally protected speech by and between adults.
- 183. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments because it is not the least restrictive means of accomplishing any compelling governmental purpose.
- 184. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments because it is substantially overbroad.

COUNT II

Violation of Minors' Rights Under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution

- 185. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 186. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution because it interferes with the rights of minors to access and view material that to them is protected by the First Amendment.
- 187. The Amended Act is unconstitutional because it prohibits the dissemination to all minors of any age of any material that is deemed "harmful to minors," despite the fact that some of the material has value for older minors.
- 188. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendment rights of minors because it is substantially overbroad.

COUNT III

Prior Restraint

- 189. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 190. The Amended Act operates as an unconstitutional prior restraint, and thereby deprives Plaintiffs and their members, users and customers of (a) access to constitutionally protected content, and (b) the ability to publish constitutionally protected content on the Internet, in violation of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.

COUNT IV

Inadequate Procedures

- 191. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 192. The Amended Act affords ISPs, Internet content publishers, and Internet users, including Plaintiffs and their members, users and customers, inadequate procedural protection of their rights, in violation of the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

COUNT V

Violation of the Right to Communicate and Access Information Anonymously Under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution

- 193. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 194. The Amended Act violates the First and Fourteenth Amendment right to communicate and access information anonymously, insofar as it effectively requires Internet users to identify themselves in order to gain access to constitutionally-protected speech.

COUNT VI

Compelled Speech

- 195. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 196. Section 9 of the Amended Act requires Utah-located or connected Internet content publishers, including Plaintiffs and their members, users and customers, to label their speech as "harmful to minors," in violation of the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

COUNT VII

Violation of the Commerce Clause Of the United States Constitution

- 197. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 198. The Amended Act violates the Commerce Clause because it regulates communications that take place wholly outside of the State of Utah.
- 199. The Amended Act violates the Commerce Clause because it constitutes an unreasonable and undue burden on interstate and foreign commerce.
- 200. The Amended Act violates the Commerce Clause because it subjects interstate use of the Internet to inconsistent regulations.

COUNT VIII

Preemption Under 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1)

- 201. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege paragraphs 1 180 as if set forth entirely herein.
- 202. Portions of the Amended Act violate 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1) and as such are preempted pursuant to § 230(e)(3) of that statute.

COUNT IX

Unconstitutional Vagueness

203. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege paragraphs 1- 180 as if set forth entirely herein.

204. The fact that the meaning of the definition of "harmful to minors" is unclear because of the ambiguity of the Of/with Amendment causes those provisions of the Amended Act which refer to "harmful to minors" materials to be unconstitutionally vague.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court:

- A. Declare that sections 4 through 7 and 9 of H.B. 260, as amended by H.B. 5, violate the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to and the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution, and that the Amended Act violates 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1);
- B. Preliminarily and permanently enjoin Defendants, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of the injunction, from enforcing such provisions;
- C. Award Plaintiffs their reasonable costs and fees pursuant to 42U.S.C. § 1988; and

D. Grant Plaintiffs such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Respectfully submitted

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the state of Utah:

Section 1. Section 13-2-9 is enacted to read:

__13-2-9, Internet -- Consumer education.

(1) The Division of Consumer Protection shall, subject to appropriation, contract with a person to make public service announcements advising consumers about the dangers of using the Internet, especially:

(a) material harmful to minors;

- (b) steps a consumer may take to learn more about the dangers of using the Internet:
- (c) information about how a service provider can help a consumer learn more about the dangers of using the Internet, including the service provider's duties created by this bill; and (d) how a consumer can monitor the Internet usage of family members.
- (2) Monies appropriated under Subsection (1) shall be paid by the Division of Consumer Protection to a person only if:
 - (a) the person is a nonprofit organization; and accordance with Subsection (1).

(3) In administering any monies appropriated for use under this section, the Division of Consumer Protection shall comply with Title 63, Chapter 56, Utah Procurement Code.

Section 2. Section 67-5-19 is enacted to read:

67-5-19. Adult content registry.

(1) As used in this section:

- (a) "Access restricted" means access restricted as defined in Section 76-10-1230.
- (b) "Consumer" means a consumer as defined in Section 76-10-1230.
- (c) "Content provider" means a content provider as defined in Section 76-10-1230.

- (2) The attorney general, in consultation with other entities as the attorney general considers appropriate, shall:
- (a) create a database, called the adult content registry, consisting of a list of content providers' sites, that shall be based on a Uniform Resource Locator address, domain name,

and

Internet Protocol address or a similar addressing system, that:

- (i) are added to the database under Subsection (2)(b); and
- (ii) provide material harmful to minors that is not access restricted:
- (b) add a content provider site to the adult content registry only if the attorney general determines that the content provider is providing content that contains material harmful to that is not access restricted:

(c) when the attorney general determines that a content provider site should be placed on the adult content registry, if the content provider lists e-mail contact information, the attorney

general shall notify the content provider and hosting company, if available, by e-mail;

- (4) The attorney general shall establish a system for the reporting of material transmitted to a consumer in violation of Section 76-10-1232.

Section 3. Section 76-10-1204 is amended to read:

76-10-1204. Distributing pornographic material.

- (1) A person is guilty of distributing pornographic material when he knowingly:
- (a) sends or brings any pornographic material into the state with intent to distribute or exhibit it to others;
- (b) prepares, publishes, prints, or possesses any pornographic material with intent to distribute or exhibit it to others;
- (c) distributes or offers to distribute, exhibits or offers to exhibit any pornographic material to others;
 - (d) writes, creates, or solicits the publication or advertising of pomographic material;
- (e) promotes the distribution or exhibition of material he represents to be pornographic;
- (f) presents or directs a pornographic performance in any public place or any place exposed to public view or participates in that portion of the performance which makes it pornographic.
 - (2) Each distributing of pornographic material as defined in Subsection (1) is a separate offense.

- (3) It is a separate offense under this section for:
- (a) each day's exhibition of any pornographic motion picture film; and
- (b) each day in which any pornographic publication is displayed or exhibited in a public place with intent to distribute or exhibit it to others.

 - (4) (a) An offense under this section is a third degree felony punishable by:
 - (i) a minimum mandatory fine of not less than $1,000 plus $10 for each article exhibited up to the maximum allowed by law; and [by]

- (ii) incarceration, without suspension of sentence in any way, for a term of not less than 30 days.
 - (b) This Subsection (4) supersedes Section 77-18-1.
